YALE-PRINCETON GAME TO-DAY.

ALL EYES TURNED ON THE ANNUAL STRUGGLE AT NEW-HAVEN-A GREAT CROWD EXPECTED-YALE THE FAVORITE.

The greatest excitement has been aroused in collegiate and athletic circles by the annual Yale-Princeton football game, which will be played this afternoon at New-Haven. While there are two or three other games of considerable importance to be played next week, yet the Yale-Princeton struggle to-day is without question the climax and the supreme contest of the year, and interest in it, would ordinarily be at fever heat, is increased tenfold by the tie game which Harvard and Yale played at Cambridge last Saturday.

Yale's field, which will be the scene of the great battle to-day, accommodates about twenty thou-sand people, and it is safe to say that every seat of that number will be filled with shouting en-thusiasts when the play begins at 2 p. m. A large number of special trains will be run from New-York to New-Haven this morning. A large delegation of students will start early from Princeton. and their numbers will be swelled here by big crowds from the Princeton and Yale clubs in New-York and from all the other people who rarely fall to be present at a great football struggle.

Yale and Princeton are old time foes upon the gridfron and have met on the striped field for two decades or more. So far as the number of victories won goes Yale has the better record, but Princeton has always proved a most aggressive foe and one hard to beat, and in recent years the Tigers have won their full share of victory. In '96 the New-Jersey men overwhelmed Yale by a score running up into the twenties. The next year Yale won in a sensational game by a score of Richards, 6 to 0. Last year the Tigers turned the tables again and made the same score against Yale.

The reason that for Yale men the struggle to-day has unprecedented interest is because the conditions are so precisely similar to those that prevailed in 1897. Then as now it was the case that Yale had been defeated in the previous season by Princeton, whose winning eleven remained almost intact. In Adams, fullback 1897, as now, Yale started out with a lot of green, material, and showed such weakness in the early season that Harvard was named as an easy winner for the game to be played at Cambridge. Then as now Yale took a magnificent Yale brace and tied the game with Harvard. The sequence in 1897 was a Yale victory over Princeton at New-Haven. Will this same sequence be followed out this year? That is the problem whose deciding the twesty thousand people will watch with bated

Inasmuch as Yale's brace against Harvard last Saturday was even more surprising than the one she took in 1897 Yale men believe that their team will win this afternoon. So confident, in fact, do they feel, that they are giving odds on the New-Haven eleven. Five to 4 has been a common wager, and the day before yesterday a bet was recorded at the New-York Stock Exchange of $100 to $60. It is difficult to say how the record of the teams warrant such strong odds on Yale. The newspapers have been filled with a large and interesting variety of hard luck stories from Princeton all the week. But no one doubts that these have been sent forth deliberately for the purpose of influencing the betting, and, if possible, for arousing some feeling of overconfidence in the Yale team. It is safe to say that Princeton will come to the scratch to-day in good shape and prepared to put up the strongest kind of football. People who have watched the game closely throughout this season have declared they would not be surprised to see another tie game to-day. It should be borne in mind, however, that Yale and Princeton seldom play a draw. Either one side wins or the other, and the chances are greatly in favor of the game this afternoon resulting decisively. The Princeton by straight football, for the reason that the Princeton team has shown such a strong defence all the year. They believe, moreover, that Yale's line can be penetrated, for it was only on her own goal line that Yale showed her wonderful defence this year. The men in blue, on the other hand, believe that McBride's punting is going to be a great factor in the game to-day. They believe their men are in better condition and will play far more dashriety of hard luck stories from Princeton all the year. The men in blue, on the other hand, believe that McBride's punting is going to be a great factor in the game to-day. They believe their men are in better condition and will play far more dashing football than Princeton. In a word, they are confident of their ability to gain a victory.

The record of the games since 1877 between Yale and Princeton is as follows:

There was not much betting in the corridors of the hotel last night, for there it was almost all Princeton money. But it was impossible for the New-Jersey collegians anywhere to obtain the odds from Yale that were given early in the week. In fact. Yale men began to demand small odds them-

Last evening the members of the Tiger eleven were entertained at their hotel by some musicians and professional funmakers, with the idea of relieving the minds of the players from thoughts of the battle and the doughty deeds they must perform to-day. Harry Brown, end on the '93 Princeton eleven, and one of the present team's coaches, said: "We know the hard proposition that we are going up against to-day. We know that Yale's eleven is strong, but we believe that ours is going up against to-day, eleven is stronger."

Charlie Young, of the Princeton Theological Seminary, the famous quarterback on Cornell's '37 and '38 teams, who has been with the Tigers during the whole season, said of the Yale-Princeton game. "I believe Princeton will win the game. Comparing the two teams I think the Tigers have a better eleven than Yale. There is not much difference in the teams' defence, but Princeton has a better and faster set of ends, and Hillebrand at right tackle will easily outclass his man. I don't believe the New-Haven men will be able to gain through Princeton's line on either side.

"As regards the positions back of the line, Wheeler will punt fully as well as McBride, Hutchinson is one of the best quarters in the business, and is much superior to Yale's quarter. He and Wheeler are better than Fincke and McBride at running back punts. McCord, Reiter and McClave are better line buckers than Yale's backs. When Princeton plays the game she is capable of there is no team in the country that can defeat her, and doubtless she will play her best to-morrow. I believe Princeton will win the game by at least two touchdowns."

Wesleyan and Williams have both dediscounted by the coaches and players, and every man expects to have to tackle his match to-mer-row. Yale hopes by superior play in the rest of the line to offset Princeton's advantage at ends. Behind the line the Blue should have a distinct advantage with two nearly game.

Brown and Dartmouth will play an interesting game at Providence, though Dartmouth's reputation this year is below par, owing to the severe injuries which several of her leading players have sustained, keeping them out of the game altogether. On previous records of games played already Brown should be a fairly easy winner.

Lehigh and Lafayette, the old time Pennsylvania rivals, will play their second championship game of the season at South Bethlehem. Lafayette won the first game between the two colleges at Easton on November 4 by a score of 17 to 6, and the chances are all in favor of Lafayette again proving the victor to-day.

Oberlin has been saving all her energies for the game against the Carlisle Indians at Carlisle to-day. The Ohio college men went so far as to cancel their game with Cornell that was to be played last Saturday, with the express purpose of getting their men into good shape so as to make a formidable showing against the Indians.

The annual freshman game between the Harvard and Yale elevens will be played at Cambridge. More attention is given to freshman football at Harvard generally than at Yale, and the chances seem to favor the Crimson players slightly.

In the West, Chicago will play the University of Minnesota at Chicago. Brown and Dartmouth will play an interesting evenly matched sets of backs, while the Tigers have still to find a first class running mate for McCord. As a whole, Yaie's team is a finished production of the hands of the country's best experts, and it will take a wonderfully strong aggregation to triumph over it. It was announced to-night that for the first time in Yaie's history her president would be present at a great football game. The managers offered him and his friends complimentary seats in the middle stand, but, to the surprise of all, acting upon his democratic principles, President Hadley refused the offer, saying that he was unwilling to receive any preference over other graduates. Accordingly he applied by the regular means, and his seats were allotted with the other alumnit. means, and his seats were allotted with the other alumni.

The battle between the managers and the speculators was decided in favor of the former, when this morning a large number of end stand tickets were placed on public sale, together with some side stand tickets which had been returned. The speculators, who recently were offering end seats at $3, are now glad to get rid of them at their face value. The large crowd which will witness the game is not expected before to-morrow morning. The advance guard arrived this evening, and already the hotels have filled all their spare rooms. The Princeton team will arrive here soon after 12 o'clock, and will go directly to the field, where everything is in readiness to begin the great contest at the appointed hour.

Following are the statistics in regard to the makeup of the Yale team:

NEW-YORK ATHLETIC CLUB TEAM DEFEATS YALE

to the hard luck stories emanating from Princeton, a lot of money came down and was offered at odds of 5 to 3 on Yale. That money went like hot cakes, and Princeton men are looking for more. In spite of the magnificent work done by Yale last Saturday, the Tigers' coaches say they have the winning team. Straight football will be the order of the day, and it is expected to win. Tricks are well enough to turn loose on small college teams, but Yale not coming under that category they are not expected to avail against her.

Mills and Hillebrand and Palmer, as well as McCord and Hutchinson, are past the period of uncertainty. If Yale is able to utilize Hillebrand for much rain it will be one of the bitterest pills that Princeton coaches have had to swallow since '97. McCord is as right as a trivet, and will be sent against whatever vulnerable points may be discovered in the Yale line with a force, precision and repetition that, it is hoped, will be irresistible. The Washington and Jefferson game found Princeton's line weak on offence with little or no attempt made to assist the halfbacks, with ragged interference and a bad habit of fumbling prominent in the backfield. These things, the coaches say, have been remedied in the practice this week.

When it comes to kicking the tales from New-Haven would appear to cast Wheeler's ability into the shade, but the Princeton coaches say they are ready and prepared for any kicking game which Yale may start. If Wheeler is outkicked by McBride the gain is expected to be more than neutralized by Hutchinson's proclivity for running back punts. But it remains to be proved that Wheeler will be outpointed. He furnished a little surprise last year, and he may duplicate it.

The Princeton team is expected to line up as foilows: Palmer, left end: Pell, left tackle; Mills, left gaard; Booth, centre: Edwards, right guard; Hillebrand, right tackle; Poe, right end; Hutchinson, quarrier back; McCord, left halfback; Reifer, right halfback: Wheeler, fullback.

Statistics of the team are as foll The New-York Athletic Club hockey team easily defeated the Yale University seven last evening at the St. Nicholas Rink, by a score of 7 to 0. The Yale forwards seemed to fall all over themselves Smith, the goal keeper of Yale, stopped the puck several times when it looked as if a goal was sure for the New-York Athletic Club. Brock and Coxe played in good defence, driving the puck out of their territory several times. Buckwalder, one of the Yale forwards, was hurt in practice and could game began. Captain Campbell seemed to be the puck for his team. Cobb, who is a new man on the ice, played a forward position for the New-York Athletic Club and did clever work, both in passing and shooting the puck. Fenwick seemed to do as he pleased with the puck, and often lifted it out of his territory right up to Yale's goal posts. In the first half Fenwick shot the puck through the goal posts for a goal on a pass from Wallace. the goal posts for a goal on a pass from Wallace. Again Fenwick scored, lifting the puck through the hir and between Yale's goal posts for the second goal. Before the half was over Wallace got the puck out of a scrimmage and shot a goal. The Yale men tried hard to score, but it was useless, and had it not been for Smith, the goal keeper, the New-York Athletic Club players would have scored several more goals. In the second half Cobb got in his work and shot the puck out of a scrimmage between Yale's posts for a goal. Fenwick scored soon after. Before the half was over Cobb made two more goals, one on a pass from Fenwick and the other on a lift. Smith and Brock did good defence work for Yale. The lineup:

REAL ESTATE.

VARIETY THE FEATURE OF THE PRES-ENT MARKET-MANY DWELLING AND FLAT HOUSES SOLD. Sales of dwelling houses formed the principal part of yesterday's real estate business, which was tions reported and in the character of the items. A number of flathouses also changed hands. There was nothing of a sensational nature, but the deals represented property in all parts of the city, and brokers find in that one of the best phases of the present situation. While there has been a tendency on some days for certain sections to appear favored in the reports for certain sections to appear favored in the reports of sales, the general condition is one of stability in all lines. The trading is largely of a professional character, it is true, but until the market takes a turn for the better in the long delayed investment purchases there is some cause for satisfaction in the thought that brokers representing all sections are getting a share of what business is being done. Details of yesterday's real estate business follow: Samuel Goldsticker has sold the southeast corner of Fifth-ave, and One-hundred-and-eleventh-st. 50 lix100, for the estate of Bernard Earle to Janpole & Werner.

INSURE YOUR TITLE.

[From Brooklyn (N. Y.) Citizen, May 16, 1899.] HE WAS A BIGAMIST.

The People to Whom He Mortgaged His Real Estate Must Suffer.

In 1896, Catherine, the wife of J. F., became insane and was sent to the Amityville Home. A committee of her person and estate was appointed. J. F., imagining, perhaps, that he was at liberty to do so, married again. He owned much real estate in Brooklyn and New York; and, after his bigamous marriage, mortgaged it, his new wife, Ann, as she was called, joining with him in the mortgages. He died, and now his real widow, by her committee, is suing for admeasurement of dower in his estate. The mortgages were procured through reputable lawyers, and it is expected that much litigation will result. The widow's interest in the mortgaged property amounts to about $40,000.
